constitutional, administrative and criminal. The research focuses on defining the limit and degree of legitimacy of intervention by a member of the Police Force into the fundamental rights and freedoms of the person against whom the service is performed. Based on a critical legal analysis of relevant legal and internal regulations, decisions of public authorities, professional and scientific literature, the research brings qualified conclusions and guidelines, usable in applied police practice, which will specify how to perform a service intervention so that its implementation is consistent with the law, and thus the basic postulates of a democratic and rule of law were fulfilled.

Co-researcher of the APVV project no. 17-0217: Service interventions of members of the Police Force and application of the principle of proportionality from a criminal and administrative point of view

The research is focused on a thorough review of the performance of official interventions of members of the Police Force with the use of coercive means, rights and obligations with an emphasis on respecting the legal principle of adequacy of the performance of official intervention. Based on a critical legal analysis of relevant legal and internal regulations, decisions of public authorities, professional and scientific literature, the research brings qualified conclusions and guidelines, usable in applied police practice, which will specify how to perform a service intervention so that its implementation is consistent with the law, and thus the basic postulates of a democratic and rule of law were fulfilled.
