	Methamphetamine issues in the Slovak Republic and in the Central European area In: Drugs & Forensics Bulletin Národní protidrogové centrály [print]. - ISSN 1211-8834. – Year 24, no. 2 (2018), 22-26 p. [JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš (100%)] In his work, the author dealt with the most serious problem on the Czechoslovak drug scene, the issue of methamphetamine, which transcends the borders of these two countries, and the related issue of drug precursors, which are addressed by legislation from the point of view of the EC. Based on evidence and information, the author identified a common and biggest problem on the drug scene in Central Europe, together with factors (historical, legislative, institutional) - security environment) that have the greatest weight for this dynamic process, the gradual spread of methamphetamine to neighboring countries. At the end of the work, the author also defined the basic directions that the affected countries should initiate, but not individually, but together. The basic shortcoming in the promotion of national interests at the supranational level is the absence of available, relevant and based evidence-based information. For this reason, this work was created and the outputs of which were used in the joint negotiations between the Czech and Slovak Republics in the agreement on a joint procedure to enforce a legislative proposal addressed to the EC on the inclusion of red phosphorus as a key drug precursor in methamphetamine production. categories of specified substances. From the point of view of the Slovak Republic, based on the output of this work, a Working Group for methamphetamine was established in 2018, established within the agenda of the Government Council for Drug Problems, where the first meeting presented the results of this work. In addition to the national level, 3 bilateral meetings were held between experts from the Czech and Slovak Republics, in order to prepare and submit a joint legislative proposal to the EC. COMMISSION DELEGATED REGULATION (EU) 2020/1737 of 14 July 2020 amending Regulation (EC) No 1257/1999 of the European Parliament and of the Council was subsequently adopted in 2020. 273/2004 and Council Regulation (EC) No 111/2005 as regards the inclusion of certain drug precursors in the list of designated substances. From the point of view of the Slovak Republic (but also the Czech Republic), the above managed not only to submit, but also to finalize a legislative proposal with an impact on the EU internal market and criminal proceedings in the Slovak Republic. Negotiations between the Slovak Republic and the EC have been taking place since at least 2015. The significance of this work lies in the outputs that were used at the national, bilateral level (with the Czech Republic) and the EU level (EC) with a practical impact on the amendment of the EU regulation on drug precursors in the EU legal and security area. Therefore, I classify this work in the A + category.
2.	AFD JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš - JAKABOVIČ, Štefan Organized crime in the Central European region with a focus on illicit trafficking in drugs and new psychoactive substances / aut. Tomáš Jakobovič, aut. Štefan Jakobovič, rev. Dezider Bango, rev. Pavol Augustín. In: Organized crime in the Central European region - trends and challenges: proceedings of an international scientific conference: Bratislava, 22. 11. 2016. - Bratislava : The Academy of the Police Force in Bratislava, 2017. - ISBN 978-80-8054-720-2. - 110-122 p. Sign.: kópia, F 19223 [JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš (50%) - JAKABOVIČ, Štefan (50%)] A In his work, the author focused on organized crime in the Central European area (characteristics), where he tried to define its operational environment and the operational environment of law enforcement agencies. In general, in the Central European area, it is extremely difficult to process a more comprehensive and comprehensive output related to organized crime, also due to the almost absolute absence of scientific papers, studies, monographs, professional articles, etc. (The exception is investigative journalists, who deal with organized crime retrospectively, with an interval of 20-30 years, where the most up-to-date information and documents are absent). Therefore, it is an attempt and a basic definition of organized crime, its operational environment carried out on the basis of the author's empirical output (more than 10 years of experience from many transnational drug operations as coordinator or case officer) and at the same time representing the author in transnational expert groups for Slovak Republic (EC, EUROPOL, EUROJUST, Council of Europe and others). The outputs of the thesis therefore lie in its uniqueness in terms of the chosen topic, its attempt to develop and transform the author's summarized experiences from the implemented transnational drug operations into theoretical work to a limited extent. Based on the identification of specific problems arising from practice, the author makes some suggestions for improving the conditions for law enforcement authorities in order to make the fight against transnational organized crime more effective.

	The outputs contained in the work can serve the individual for a better understanding of the issue of transnational organized crime and at the same time for policy makers in security issues. I therefore classify this work in category A.
3.	AFD JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš - JAKABOVIČ, Štefan Threat of organised crime in European union as a current security challenge / aut. Tomáš Jakabovič, aut. Štefan Jakabovič. In: SECURITY FORUM 2017 : conference proceedings from the 10th annual international scientific conference, february 8th - 9th, 2017 : Matej Bel university, Banská Bystrica, Slovakia. - Banská Bystrica : Univerzita Mateja Bela v Banskej Bystrici, 2017. - ISBN 978-80-972673-2-2. - S. 29-37. Sign.: kópia [JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš (50%) - JAKABOVIČ, Štefan (50%)] In this work, the author tried to characterize organized crime as a security threat in the EU. Through defined factors, the author defined not only the operational environment of organized crime, but also its activities. The author tried to explain how the legislation affects the planning and implementation of transnational organized crime activities in the EU. Given the uniqueness of the EU's legal and security environment, it is very difficult to analyze the activities of transnational organized crime in the EU, where EUROPOL has a near-monopoly position. However, EUROPOL's methodology is based only on the data at its disposal and, in addition, is largely influenced by its centralist position, without taking into account regional security aspects. It is regional security that is proving to be crucial and paramount for the EU member states, including the Slovak Republic, and which, in view of this fact, also implement their security policy and national interests. And they adjust funds and capacities (personnel, material and technical) as needed. In his work, the author therefore points to organized crime as a security threat that needs to be addressed more comprehensively and the approach to it adjusted within the policy to take into account its specifics (operational environment) and, conversely, adapted the environment for law enforcement authorities to making the fight against it more effective and exercising better control. Due to the almost absolute absence of literature on the issue of organized crime, this is a unique work, the outputs of which are in principle applicable to other EU member states. The outputs of the thesis therefore lie in its uniqueness in terms of the chosen topic, its attempt to develop and transform the author's summarized experiences from the implemented transnational drug operations into theoretical work to a limited extent. Based on the identification of specific problems arising from practice, the author makes some suggestions for improving the conditions for law enforcement authorities in order to make the fight against transnational organized crime more effective. The outputs contained in the work can serve the individual for a better understanding of the issue of transnational organized crime and at the same time for policy makers in security issues. I therefore classify this work in category A.

Štefan Jakabovič, aut. Tomáš Jakabovič. In: Košická bezpečnostná revue [elektronický zdroj] : polročník VŠBM v Košiciach. - ISSN 1338-6956. - Year 6, no. 2 (2016), online, 136-143 p. Sign.: kópia [JAKABOVIČ, Štefan (50%) - JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš (50%)] In his work, the author dealt with the legislative regulation of the fight against drug trafficking in the legal and security environment of the EU (scientific reduction). From the point of view of the Slovak Republic, interests or security risks, its national most important security environment, which affects both the black market in drugs and the activities of transnational organized crime in the EU. This work was created for a better and more accurate understanding of the drug problem and the fight against drugs, by law enforcement authorities as well as the legal community. In the case of legislation, this is a long-term underestimated factor. At the same time, it is the law that gives law enforcement power in the form of their powers. Its control, and for a better understanding, is required as a prerequisite for combating drug trafficking. At the same time, it is a signal for the regulation of organized

Pravo Ekonomija Menadžment II. - Bački Petrovac : Srpsko Razvojno Udruženje, 2016. - ISBN 978-86-80394-10-7. - 85-98 p. Sign.: kópia [JAKABOVIČ, Štefan (34%) - JAKABOVIČ, Tomáš (33%) - RAJDA, Zdeněk (33%)] In his work, the author focused on more comprehensive supranational legislation and analysis of documents regulating the legal framework for the fight against drugs in order to better (more precise and especially more comprehensive) understanding (also for study purposes). The work is usable not only from the perspective of the Slovak Republic, but also from the perspective of other countries, as the work primarily performs a legal analysis of UN documents. UN documents form the basic legal framework for dealing with the drug problem, they create the so-called minimum standards of a legislative nature, legally binding on the signatories. Although the EU's legal environment is unique, it is in many respects very close to these standards, but it adapts it to the EU, the internal and customs markets. At that time, the work deals with a huge and legislative problem, which was the issue of new psychoactive substances. New psychoactive substances have greatly affected the black market in drugs (not only in the EU) and, due to persistent legislative difficulties, have become popular in many EU countries. I therefore classify this work in category A-.
